

Welfare Architecture for All

C.F. Møller Architects

Good architecture can shape a better future — both for people and planet.

C.F. Møller Architects is one of Scandinavia's leading architectural firms, with 90 years of award-winning work in the Nordic region and worldwide. It was founded by Christian Frederik Møller in Copenhagen in 1924, and relocated to Aarhus in 1932. Today, C.F. Møller Architects is acknowledged for a design approach that uniquely integrates urban planning, landscape and architecture, as well as its significant contributions to the development of welfare societies in Scandinavia and the rest of the world.

This thoughtful and beautifully presented book illuminates the human, holistic and generous approach to architecture by C.F. Møller Architects. Unfolding the practice's most recent projects — such as Maersk Tower, Bestseller Office Complex and Aarhus University Hospital — the book tackles today's biggest themes in architecture and urban design to inspire a new welfare-centric approach in the industry.

"The built fabric of everyday life has the power to help improve that life, as long as people and their welfare are placed at the heart of the design process. That is what C.F. Møller Architects does — and has done for almost 100 years now. Their story weaves into a rich history of a welfare society in Denmark that seeks to serve and support a broad public. It is an inspiring model that we can learn from across the world", says Francesca Perry, editor Welfare Architecture for All.

A special introduction from Kent Martinussen, CEO Dansk Arkitektur Center, tells the story of how architecture has helped create and support the welfare society in Denmark and across Scandinavia. Essays from a selection of writers then explore how architecture can help us live, work, learn, heal and move better — as well as responsibly address climate change — through the lens of C.F. Møller's ambitious projects.

Now more than ever is a time to build and design better — for the benefit of all.
