Silence of Solitude

Urban Views from the Corona Pandemic

The book Silence of Solitude – Urban Views from the Corona Pandemic depicts the most intense years of the Corona pandemic with photographs and texts. A pandemic that became one of the biggest crises in the modern time.

Joakim Eneroth show how people's everyday lives were suddenly dominated by dramatic protective measures. The images capture powerful situations of isolation and loneliness in the locked-down society. The introduction text in the book is written by author John Ajvide Lindqvist.

"Perhaps the most frightening aspect of the pandemic was that all strangers suddenly became our enemies. Each and every unknown face, a potential murderer to be avoided. In my opinion, kindness is the basic condition for most people. As far as is possible, we like to help and support our fellow travellers here on Earth, in order to make life a little easier. All that changed overnight. Don't come any closer! Don't touch me, don't speak! We were forced to act contrary to our nature. This feeling is well expressed in the book Silence of Solitude."
